INTRODUCTION

WHY THESE 5 VIDEOS?

Most B2B companies don't have a video problem. They have a priority problem.

There's no shortage of video content you could make. The challenge is knowing which videos will actually move your business forward — and in what order.

This guide presents the five videos that form the essential foundation of any B2B brand's video presence. Not five nice-to-haves. Five pieces of content that do specific, measurable jobs — and when they work together, they create an ecosystem that attracts the right clients, builds trust before the first conversation, and makes your sales process significantly shorter.

Each section covers what the video is, why it matters, what it needs to do, and the single most common mistake to avoid. At the end, you'll find a prioritisation framework to help you decide where to start.

> B2B buyers complete 60–70% of their decision-making process before ever contacting a vendor. The companies that show up during that research phase with clear, credible video content are the ones that make the shortlist.

How To Use This Guide

- Read through all five video types to understand the full framework.
- Use the complexity and timeline indicators to gauge what each requires.
- Go to the Priority Guide at the end to identify your starting point.
- Take the roadmap to your next planning conversation — or bring it to us.

01

THE BRAND STORY FILM

The video that makes people trust you before they meet you.

Complexity: Medium–High Timeline: 3–6 weeks

Why You Need It

Before anyone understands what you do, they need to understand why you do it. The Brand Story Film communicates your conviction, your origin, and the belief that drives your company — in a way that makes a first-time visitor feel something rather than just learn something. This is your foundation. Everything else in your video presence is built on top of it.

WHAT IT DOES	WHO IT'S FOR	MISTAKE TO AVOID
Establishes trust, communicates values, and differentiates you from competitors who all sound the same. Lives on your homepage, About page, and LinkedIn profile. This is the video that gets forwarded in a DM.	Every type of buyer at the very beginning of their decision process. First-time visitors, procurement leads building a shortlist, potential partners and collaborators.	Making it about your services instead of your story. The moment it starts listing capabilities, it stops being a story and starts being a brochure.

02

THE EXPLAINER

The video that turns confusion into clarity in under 90 seconds.

Complexity: Low–Medium Timeline: 2–4 weeks

Why You Need It

If your product or service takes more than two sentences to explain, you need an explainer video. The goal is not to explain everything — it is to explain the most important thing in the simplest possible way. Explainers are the most functional video in your arsenal: they do a specific job (reduce friction, accelerate understanding) and they do it every time someone watches.

WHAT IT DOES	WHO IT'S FOR	MISTAKE TO AVOID
Answer the 'so what?' question every prospect has before they engage further. Reduces time your sales team spends explaining the basics. Measurably reduces bounce rate on pages where it's embedded.	Prospects who already know they have a problem and are evaluating whether you can solve it. Sales leads who've received a proposal and are trying to understand your approach.	Trying to say everything. One problem. One solution. One clear next step. If you can't say it in 90 seconds, the script needs another draft.

THE CLIENT STORY

The video that proves your work in the words of someone with nothing to gain from lying.

Complexity: Low | Timeline: 1–3 weeks

Why You Need It

This is the most underused video type in B2B, and it consistently delivers the highest return of any content investment. Not because it's impressive to produce — but because it does something nothing else can: it puts the trust signal in the mouth of someone who has no commercial incentive to say something positive. That credibility is impossible to manufacture, and buyers know it.

WHAT IT DOES	WHO IT'S FOR	MISTAKE TO AVOID
Converts consideration into confidence. Provides third-party proof that your work delivers results. Shortens sales cycles by giving prospects a version of themselves who already made the decision and benefited from it.	Prospects who are already interested but not yet convinced. Decision-makers who need to justify the choice to a board or leadership team. Buyers who've seen many vendors claim the same things.	Scripting it. The moment a client story sounds rehearsed, the trust signal is gone. Give your client three questions and a comfortable chair. Create the conditions. Don't write the script.

04

THE THOUGHT LEADERSHIP SERIES

The content habit that builds authority you can't buy.

Complexity: Low (ongoing)	Timeline: Ongoing — monthly

Why You Need It

This is not one video — it is a series. Short, consistent pieces where your experts share a perspective, challenge a conventional assumption, or offer an insight that demonstrates genuine expertise. Thought leadership video builds authority over time in a way that no single piece of content can. The companies that commit to it become the ones their market thinks of first.

WHAT IT DOES	WHO IT'S FOR	MISTAKE TO AVOID
Builds long-term authority and creates consistent reasons for your audience to return. Positions your people as industry voices rather than service providers. Generates organic reach on LinkedIn and YouTube.	People in the early research phase who are not yet ready to buy but are beginning to form preferences. Journalists, event organisers, and collaborators looking for expert voices.	Treating it as a production project rather than a content habit. One great video is marketing. Ten consistent videos over six months is authority. Start simple. Start now. Improve as you go.

05

THE FOUNDER ORIGIN STORY

The most powerful video most companies never make.

Complexity: Low–Medium Timeline: 1–2 weeks

Why You Need It

The Founder Origin Story is not a company overview with a founder narrating it. It is a person talking honestly about why they built this company — not the polished pitch version, the real version. The risk they took. The belief that drove them. The thing they see in their industry that others aren't willing to say out loud. In a B2B world full of corporate language designed to minimise offence, a founder who speaks with genuine conviction is arresting.

WHAT IT DOES

Creates human connection at scale. Builds a brand from a person rather than a logo. Attracts clients who share your values — which are almost always the clients you most want to work with.

WHO IT'S FOR

Everyone. Particularly decision-makers who buy with both their head and their gut — which, in B2B, is most of them. Those deciding whether they want to be in a room with your company for the next 12 months.

MISTAKE TO AVOID

Scripting it or having it approved by committee. The moment it sounds like a marketing message, it stops being a founder story. Sit down. Talk. Let the camera roll.

PRIORITY GUIDE

WHERE SHOULD YOU START?

Every business is at a different stage. Use this guide to identify your starting point — then build from there.

IF YOUR BIGGEST CHALLENGE IS...	START WITH
People don't know you exist or don't understand what makes you different	Video 1 — The Brand Story Film
People understand the sector but can't quite grasp what your product or service does	Video 2 — The Explainer
You're losing deals to competitors who seem more established or credible	Video 3 — The Client Story
Your growth is slowing and you need to build long-term authority in your market	Video 4 — Thought Leadership Series
You want to do something brave that changes how your entire market sees your company	Video 5 — The Founder Origin Story
You have some video but it's scattered and not working together strategically	Start with Video 1, then build the full set

The Ideal Build Order

01	Brand Story Film	Foundation. Everything else references it.
02	Explainer	Clarity for prospects already in your orbit.
03	Client Story	Proof once people are interested but not convinced.
04	Thought Leadership Series	Long-term authority engine. Start as early as possible.
05	Founder Origin Story	When you're ready to make the piece that changes everything.

PRODUCTION CHECKLIST

BEFORE YOU BRIEF A VIDEO PARTNER

Having a strong production partner makes the difference between a video that looks good and one that actually works. Before you brief anyone, make sure you can answer these questions clearly.

PURPOSE & OBJECTIVE

- ☐ What do you want the viewer to feel, think, or do after watching?
- ☐ Where will this video live — homepage, LinkedIn, sales deck, email?
- ☐ How will you measure success?

AUDIENCE

- ☐ Who specifically is watching this? (Job title, company type, what keeps them up at night)
- ☐ What do they already know about your company before they watch?
- ☐ What objection or hesitation does this video need to overcome?

STORY & CONTENT

- ☐ What is the single most important thing the viewer should take away?
- ☐ Who will appear on camera and are they comfortable speaking authentically?
- ☐ Do you have access to client voices or case study material?

PRACTICAL REQUIREMENTS

- ☐ What is your realistic budget range for this project?
- ☐ What is your deadline — and is it flexible?
- ☐ Who has final approval and are they available for a briefing conversation?

> You don't need to have every answer before you start the conversation. But knowing which questions you can't yet answer is often the most useful thing you can bring to a briefing.
